

Fidelity National Title

INSURANCE COMPANY

January 8, 2009

To Whom This May Concern:

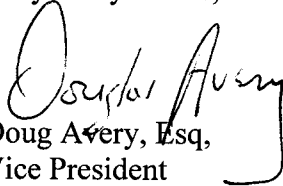

I have known Marc Zegar through my employment at Safeco Title Insurance Co, Chicago Title Insurance Co. and Fidelity Title Co. I first met him in the mid 1980's as claims counsel for Safeco. He was routinely given assignments by myself and other claims counsel of Safeco pertaining to all matters involving bankruptcy, foreclosure and related issues. In 1987 when Chicago Title Co. purchased Safeco, Marc was already representing Chicago Title and I continued to assign matters to him, often involving millions of dollars of policy exposure. Eventually, Fidelity National, my present employer, purchased Chicago Title in 2000. Marc's representation and my relationship with him was starting to wind down as Fidelity took in more claims and tried to resolve them with in-house counsel.

Marc is an extremely aggressive and innovative attorney who had a "never say die" attitude. In my career, I have not met a more effective counsel, before or since, that achieved the consistently positive results he managed to accomplish on our behalf. As far as I know, he never lost a trial for any of my title insurance company employers. He understood the concept of "victory at what cost" and never spent a disproportionate amount of precious legal fee resources to achieve the desired results.

It is my opinion that Marc will be successful at whatever mission he is given. He is a hard worker, has a high degree of integrity and would be a valuable asset in any organization.
